

Navigating Difficult Moments in Teaching Diversity and Social Justice

Edited by Mary E. Kite, Kim A. Case, Wendy R. Williams

Acknowledgments

Preface by Faye Crosby

Chapter 1: Pedagogical humility and peer mentoring for social justice education

Kim Case, Mary E. Kite, and Wendy R. Williams

Chapter 2: Ground rules for discussing diversity: Complex considerations

Susan B. Goldstein

Chapter 3: Social justice burnout: Engaging in self-care while doing diversity work

Asia Eaton and Leah R. Warner

Chapter 4: Mistakes were made by me: Recovering when an instructor's error affects classroom dynamics

Mary E. Kite, Samuel M. Colbert, and Scott M. Barrera

Chapter 5: When the professor experiences stereotype threat in the classroom

Desdmona Rios, Kim Case, Salena Brody and David Rivera

Chapter 6: Becoming a target: Anonymous threats while teaching diversity courses or working on social justice issues

Lisa S. Wagner and Ja'Nina Garrett-Walker

Chapter 7: Inclusion/exclusion: Balancing viewpoint diversity and harmful speech in the multicultural classroom

Salena M. Brody and Darren R. Bernal

Chapter 8: The efficacy paradox: Teaching about structural inequality while keeping students' hope alive

Lisa M. Brown

Chapter 9: Emotionally charged news in the classroom

Ryan M. Pickering

Chapter 10: Raising the consciousness of students holding ingroup stereotypes

Lisa M. Brown and Wendy R. Williams

Chapter 11: White privilege in the classroom

Leah R. Warner, Lisa S. Wagner, and Patrick R. Grzanka

Chapter 12: Navigating difficult moments outside the classroom

Wendy R. Williams and F. Tyler Sergent

Chapter 13: Contemporary issues in terminology: Using gender-inclusive language to create affirming spaces

Amanda J. Wyrick

Chapter 14: Aging as an element of diversity: Best practices for challenging classroom conversations and avoiding ageism

Lisa S. Wagner, Tana M. Luger and Matthew Calamia

Chapter 15: Outsiders teaching insiders: How instructors from privileged groups can effectively teach about diversity

Susan B. Goldstein

Chapter 16: When students frame prejudicial speech as “freedom of speech:” Classroom and institutional implications

Leah R. Warner

Chapter 17: Student evaluations of teaching: Can teaching social justice negatively affect one’s career?

Guy A. Boysen

Chapter 18: Flotsam and jetsam: Staying the course while navigating difficult moments in teaching diversity and social justice

Wendy R. Williams, Mary E. Kite, and Kim A. Case